What we have today is a good start though. Investment is the gateway drug to gets people to thinking bigger with this technology. Maslow's hierarchy of needs comes into play here as well. People need to feel they have enough for themselves before they start thinking of others.

Our mission is to create an open financial system for the world

An open financial system is one that is not controlled by any one country or company (just like the internet did for distributing information). We think this is the highest leverage way to bring about more economic freedom, innovation, efficiency, and equality of opportunity in the world. We have a ten year plan to get there.

- Imagine if every payment in the world was as fast, cheap, and global as sending an email.
- Imagine if anyone who had an idea for a product could have customers all over the world from day one.
- Imagine if anyone with a smartphone had access to the the same financial services we enjoy in the developed world.
